

Homofascism - 300 Articles You Have to Read to Understand What Is Meant by the Term

A challenging homework assignment: What is the pattern? What makes "homofascism" unique from other movements?
The compilation below represents the detective and archiving work of dozens of conservative activists Thank you so much -- you know who you are.

The letter, signed by Michael Sherrard of Faithful America, Dave Montez of GLAAD, Chad Griffing of Human Rights Campaign, Hilary OShelton of National Council of La Raza, Michael Keegan of People for the American Way and JRichard Cohen of SPLC, said, "We urge you to not lend the prestige of your office to the summit."

The letter accuses the conference sponsors of denigrating homosexuals by their affirmation of biblical values. It charges that FRC President Tony Perkins has described pedophilia as "a homosexual problem" and the AFA's Bryan Fischer blames homosexuality for the Nazi Party.

The conference is scheduled Oct 11-13, and its organizers say the SPLC intimidation will be unsuccessful.

37 Activist Groups, Unable to Silence NARTH's Message, Resort to Attacking NARTH Members Protesters of the 2009 NARTH convention announced a new strategy: attacking the messengers rather than the message. In a video posted on YouTube (<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1IDL4QAu0qc>), a journalism student leading the November protest shouted into a megaphone that they had been unsuccessful in stopping the work of NARTH through counter conventions, so they would instead begin to target the individual members of NARTH. Following these threats, there have indeed been attempts to discredit both NARTH members as well as non-members who do similar work. In one recent report from England, a journalist posed as a client seeking help for unwanted homosexual attractions. He set up two unsuspecting therapists, claiming to want help from them, secretly recorded their conversations, and then contacted their professional organizations to seek action against them. That same journalist is reportedly assisting others to disrupt and discredit an event in Ireland this week. In another report, activist groups investigated the background of a NARTH board member in order to publicize his past wrongdoing in an attempt to discredit the organization.

Dear Wikipedia reviewer:

It was brought to our attention recently that your article about the National Association for Research and Therapy of Homosexuality (NARTH) has numerous factual errors in it regarding us In an attempt to correct this misinformation, our editorial director Mike Hatfield attempted to make corrections to the article He attempted this two times Each time he made the corrections, they were immediately changed back by someone else In investigating who was making the changes, he found the name of Joie de Vivre, who is a lesbian socio-political activist and a member of the WikiProject LGBT studies The WikiProject site describes itself as "a group of editors who aim to improve the general quality and range of Wikipedia articles on LGBT and Queer studies topics." Vivre says –with obvious pride!– on her Wikipedia web site that she regularly changes the wording and rewrites articles dealing with gay and lesbian issues It is dangerous for your credibility to have political activists slanting articles to fit their own political objectives NARTH must have the right to post corrections to an article about itself without having a lesbian activist vandalize the site by reposting inaccurate or distorted statements about the history and goals of NARTH We insist that Vivre be prohibited from making future changes on the NARTH site – and that whatever corrections NARTH chooses to post on the site will remain there without being deleted by other anti-NARTH activists.

Sincerely,

Joseph Nicolosi, Ph.D.

President

75. Keeping Anderson Cooper Honest on Sexual Orientation Change Efforts (SOCE)

Submitted by Admin on May 29, 2012 – 9:50 am No Comment

A Call to Action to Prevent the Demise of Client, Therapist, and Parental Rights.

David H Pickup,

Licensed Marriage & Family Therapist

As Chairman of the new NARTH Client Rights Committee, I was a guest on the Anderson Cooper 360 show up until 3 hours before the show was to begin when I got an email from the producer stating there was "a time issue," and they would have to cancel the show. The reporting and scientific bias I have ever witnessed. Earlier, during the final confirmation call today, I informed them I was the NARTH representative and Chairman of their Client Rights Committee. About an hour later, I was pulled from the show. (In my opinion, once they found out I was a NARTH representative, they pulled the plug on NARTH participation.) The very courteous assistant producer told me she actually didn't know why I was pulled. Also, Cooper's producers had kept me busy for two days rearranging my therapy client schedule for this show. They confirmed my appearance several hours before the show, which included being driven in a CNN car to the Hollywood studios to appear with DrJack Drescher from the APA.

Finally, AC360 reported on California's SB1172 and the proposed ban on all forms of SOCE for minors Cooper and his guests discussed the desire to have all SOCE held to legal limits or bans.

In Hong Kong, a mainstream media reported that a Christian international school asked its teachers to sign a code of ethics claiming they would follow the teachings of the Bible. The declaration regards homosexual behavior (and any sexual activity outside man-woman marriage) as inappropriate, and states that the school might take disciplinary actions if any teacher gets caught. Then the (pro-gay) Equal Opportunities Commission, certain legislators and the Libertists lost no time in condemning the school. One outspoken lesbian star said the school must teach children to be open to all kinds of "lifestyles," and a gay star even said the school committed "violence." The Education Department soon joined and reassured that the school MUST comply with the Code of Practice against Discrimination in Employment on the Ground of Sexual Orientation. A human rights lawyer rose to hint that the school had infringed international human rights standards and the government should consider de-registering the school. All these happened when basically no teacher nor any parent ever complained a word. One father who sent his three children to the school even publicly wrote a letter in defense of the school's Biblical stand and ... the true meaning of "diversity".

The new wrinkle is that not only did they send all the death threats and such that we know about but now they have tried to sic child services on the parents calling a Christian family upbringing "child abuse" and trying to destroy this family to suit their warped ideology. They probably want to make certain she ends up in and LGBT home so they can do as they please behind closed doors. "..the patient could see that I wore a cross, and he began asking questions about God. Over the next couple of years he began moving to a place of not believing that he was born gay; he started working through his history, even became involved with a woman, and was in love with her. She became pregnant but terminated the pregnancy, and he was devastated. In his devastation, he had a relapse of his drug addiction and everything fell apart, and he blamed God—and me. So, ultimately, he sued me for what had become an unethical thing with the psychiatric association, because in essence, homosexuality is no longer considered pathological, and therefore my Christianity was cited as being an improper "imbalance of power." By having a cross around my neck, an icon on my wall, and a Bible on my desk, I was accused of unduly influencing this man, who—voluntarily—came to me. That he came voluntarily and stayed for three years was irrelevant to them. It was the mere fact that God was present, and that I had "forced" him to listen to this."

The Human Rights Campaign, a homosexual advocacy group, will not say who provided it with a confidential list of donors to the National Organization for Marriage, although NOM's chairman believes someone at the Internal Revenue Service leaked the information. The IRS also is silent on the question. Providing such donor information is a felony, John Eastman, chairman of the board for the National Organization for Marriage, told CNSNews.com. Nevertheless, Eastman told CNSNews.com, "We're going to keep pressing until we get criminal indictments brought against the people responsible."

There is now a first victim to deplore. His name is Nicolas, a 23 year old student from Angers, who was arrested while peacefully protesting against the absurd re-definition of marriage and family by his country's government. He has now been sentenced to one month of imprisonment for "rebellion".

This judgment apparently is intended as a clear message to all citizens that still dare to oppose the new gay-fascism: we are not going to listen to you, nor engage in any rational argument about the meaning of marriage and the family, but we will simply put you in jail. Dissident opinions will be silenced at all costs.

June 19, "Nicolas", 22, the first protester of the anti-gay-marriage law was sentenced to two months in prison for an imaginary rebellion.

No initial offence could be proved, the arrest was without legal basis and imprisonment appears to be that young "Nicolas" is the first political prisoner of M. Hollande's French government.

"The study lends credence to conservative charges that the nation's news media have championed the issue of same-sex marriage at the expense of objectivity," media reporter Brian Stelter asserted at The New York Times "Others have argued that news organizations are right not to overly emphasize opposition to what many see as a core civil rights issue." That's very euphemistic Some argue reporters are "not to overly emphasize" opposition? No, many liberals believe whoever still refuses to endorse "gay marriage" has as much moral authority as the Ku Klux Klan.

Ms Gillian John-Charles is the doctoral student; she's 35, a single mother with two graduate degrees who teaches math in a Chicago public school Her mistake was disagreeing with the politically left wing Roosevelt University's party line when it comes to the nature of homosexuality.

Incidents like this one are increasingly familiar to Americans who get their news and information from sources other than places like the Chicago Tribune, the Associated Press, Google News or CNN and CBS Facts don't matter; if a news story might have a negative impact on the public's perception of those pushing the LGBTQI agenda it is not allowed to see the light of day.

"Meanwhile, disturbing video footage has emerged on the internet It shows how policemen mingled among the peaceful crowd that protested peacefully in favour of marriage and family on 26 May These 'agents provocateurs' had the task of artificially provoking the violent 'incidents' that Manuel Valls, the French Minister of the Interior, had 'warned' against prior to the demonstration The use of 'agents provocateurs' is a feature that is typically used by totalitarian regimes It shows how far the gay lobby in Europe is prepared to go to push through its agenda."

And a recent report documents all this As Hilary White states, "A report will be presented today at a hearing at the Council of Europe detailing systematic use of excessive and violent police actions by France's socialist government to suppress opposition to the same-sex 'marriage' law The report on the French 'Manif pour Tous and its police repression' will be presented in conjunction with today's session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and will be presented to the United Nations in Geneva.

In 2006, a noted advocate for traditional marriage, Maggie Gallagher, warned that the legalization of same-sex marriage would lead to constraints on religious freedom Writing in the Weekly Standard, Gallagher saw the end of adoptions services by Boston Catholic Charities as a foreshadowing of things to come (To retain its license, Gallagher explained, the agency would have to abide by the state's anti-discrimination law, which had been extended to married same-sex couples.) She couched her warning in the form of a question:

This March, then, unexpectedly, a mere two years after the introduction of gay marriage in America, a number of latent concerns about the impact of this innovation on religious freedom ceased to be theoretical How could Adam and Steve's marriage possibly hurt anyone else? When religious-right leaders prophesy negative consequences from gay marriage, they are often seen as overwrought The First Amendment, we are told, will protect religious groups from persecution for their views about marriage So who is right? Is the fate of Catholic Charities of Boston an aberration or a sign of things to come?

Seven years later, we have the answer: as of this writing, there have been at least 11 instances of wedding vendors and venues facing some form of recrimination—threats, boycotts, protests, and the intervention of state or judicial authorities—because they denied services for gay nuptials because of their faith.

A Washington state judge has been officially reprimanded by the Judicial Conduct Commission after refusing to officiate same-sex weddings for what he said were “philosophical and religious reasons.” Thurston County Superior Court Judge Gary Tabor first came under scrutiny by the Commission after Washington voters approved a measure late last year authorizing same-sex “marriage” in the state Immediately prior to the law's taking effect, in a private meeting between judges and court personnel, Tabor had expressed discomfort with the idea of officiating gay nuptials One of the attendees later leaked his comments to the press, which reported them widely.

In her book, Prophecy, Pansexuality and Pandemonium, Thio identifies three key strategies of the Christophobic activists to target Christians:

1) Discredit those whose public values are shaped by their religious convictions, including Christians, by accusing them of instigating a ‘creeping theocracy’ Never mind the historical fact, she points out, that Christianity invented the values of limited government by separating two jurisdictional spheres based on Jesus' principle: “Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's” (Mark 12:17).

2) Denigrate Christianity and demonize Christians as hateful hicks through smear campaigns and directing abusive invective to those exercising their right of moral dissent Ironically, they should lose any moral ground they purport to assert through their vicious bullying tactics if people will become aware of the contradiction of the Christophobic activists crashing Christian forums, like blog discussions and Facebook pages, offensively telling the Christians there how “hateful” they are.

3) Discriminate against Christians and Judeo-Christian values The Christophobic activists demand special privileges for anti-theistic or irreligiously shaped views in seeking to shut out religiously shaped convictions from public expression and influence.

When you hear the canard from gay marriage enthusiasts that kids of same-sex couples need "protections," this is equivalent to what was originally in Article IV, stipulating that if someone had a contract over another person, nobody could "discharge" the bonded person from service Such is a drastic inversion of the legitimate intent of adoption, which is meant to be a fulfillment of society's duty to parentless children, not the fulfillment of adult desires for captive children in their homes Having studied how slavery proliferated and got worse during the Renaissance and Enlightenment, I am not afraid to share my concern about the precedent it would set for gays to claim that the Constitution affords them a right that we fought a whole Civil War to prove human beings could not exercise.

In the watered down, oversimplified world of gay bloggers, I was the evil bigot who compared gay parents to slave owners Some even summarized my years of research as, "he equates gay marriage to slavery." This was, in the eyes of students and administrators, beyond the pale.

I was not the only one I was one of three speakers named by a queer graduate students' group at Stanford as so dangerous and bigoted that we should not be given university backing of any kind Both the Stanford graduate and undergraduate student councils voted by large majorities to block funding to the Stanford Anscombe Society.

Ritualized crying became the weapon of choice We heard about well-intended homosexuals being thrown out of the house by mean Christian parents We heard about stellar gay citizens "just wanting to build families." In endless performances of rhetorical masochism, we heard about kids of gay people longing to have society applaud their guardians for wrenching them away from their own biological roots We heard about horrible bullies committing all these mythical crimes against helpless gay people:

- Stiffing lesbian waitresses on tips because they hate their lifestyle.
- Barring a lesbian mom from visiting her lover in the emergency room because they're gay.

- Spray-painting "Kill the Gay" on lesbians' garages.

- Burning gay men's hands with hot metals.
- Jumping a gay man en masse, calling him names, and beating him to a pulp.
- Spray-painting "Hey Tranny, know your place" inside Vassar dormitories.
- Posting homophobic messages so prolifically at Oberlin College that the whole school had to shut down.

Beyond the fabrications, there are the intentional misreadings of real events – the belief, for instance, that Matthew Shepard was killed because of homophobia rather than out of intimate partner violence by another queer man; the conviction that 12,000 homosexuals were kicked out of the military for being gay when in fact most of them asked to leave using an escape valve (Don't Ask Don't Tell) that has now been taken away from them; the certainty that Tyler Clementi's 2010 suicide resulted from gay-bashing rather than the eighteen-year-old's distraught response to the fallout of risky sexual behavior with older strangers he was meeting over the internet.

Julea Ward was a graduate student at Eastern Michigan University She asked to refer a client to a different counselor, based on the fact that her religious beliefs disallowed her from affirming an unchaste homosexual relationship As Jeremy Tedesco points out:

Her objection is to providing counseling on certain topics, not to counseling any particular group

So the claim that Julea refused to see clients who identified as gay is patently false.

The actual facts are that Julea faced a values conflict when a potential client sought counseling about a homosexual relationship Recognizing the likely values conflict with the client, she asked her professor whether she should refer him before any meeting took place and was instructed to do so But the University charged Julea with "imposing values" on the potential client, and disobeying ethical rules that apply to counselors It then expelled her from the program, even though she was a stellar student who was carrying a 3.91 GPA.

In the ensuing year, my life became an endless array of traumas Repeated attempts to get me fired failed, so finally the gay lobby placed me on a "commentator accountability" list with a host of other people identified as "anti-gay" and blocked from access in the mainstream media The Supreme Court cases on DOMA and Proposition 8 sucked me into the vortex, as did the fight for gay marriage in Minnesota, the struggle for gay marriage in France and Britain, and the battle over gay adoption in Russia's Duma I'd spent twenty years trying to be a writer, but I ended up receiving international attention not for what I wrote, but rather because my life seemed to people like a tawdry Jerry Springer vignette.

A great deal has been made of Obama's invocation of gay and lesbian rights as a reason to chill relations with Russia Without getting into Snowden or Syria, it is the epitome of bad faith for Americans to slam Russia based on their laws regarding homosexuality Here is why.

As this LifeSiteNews article points out, the law at the center of this controversy imposes a penalty of roughly US $156.00 on people who promote the gay lifestyle to minors In California, there is currently a law forbidding mental health professionals from promoting the ex-gay lifestyle to minors Similar laws are now pending in Massachusetts and New Jersey Since anyone counseling minors to avoid homosexual inclinations would be breaking these state laws, he or she would be a criminal and a derelict professional, subject (I presume) to losing his or her license Hence, such professionals face penalties far more severe than $156.00.

This counter-petition not only opposes official recognition of the SCOP, but also asks university officials to renounce it "unless (its members) reformulate club policy, in which childhood outcomes should not be included as a defense against marriage."

"The petition sought to deny us official recognition as a student club and so the ability to organize events through which to explore and explain our club's perspective," Notre Dame senior Tim Kirchoff, a member of SCOP, told The College Fix"It accused us of not entering into responsible discourse about social science before we had a meaningful opportunity to do so in the context of a wider conversationThere's something just a little silly about that."

But the counter-petition claims that SCOP's motives "can only be interpreted as discrimination against individuals based on sexual orientation." The link between his criticisms of HRC and the loss of his job at the Voice is not that clear, and Thrasher has pointed out that the Voice helped him to disseminate the Gawker article critiquing the "queer military industrial complex."

White gay man sues black university over discrimination (Ridiculous) <http://campusreform.org/?ID=5688>

The list of changes gives the school two years to have at least two "faculty members of color" in every single department who are "engaging in critical race and ethnic studies scholarship with a social justice emphasis." It also demands that students with "historically marginalized backgrounds" have the opportunity to be involved in hiring these faculty. Further demands include hiring more "medical providers of historically marginalized identities whose work is rooted in social justice" and increasing the number of "non-white" students to meet very specific proportions. "In two years, the university student body should be proportional to three-fourths of the city demographics of non-white groups (For example, the student body should be 13.5% Black in two years compared to the city demographics of 18% Black residents)."

The list also calls for a gender-neutral restroom in every building and a faith-neutral “meditation and healing” room on every campus.

At Tufts, as at virtually every other school where this has become an issue, the core dispute concerned whether or not students who disagree with TCF's belief that sex outside of heterosexual marriage is sinful should be eligible to lead the group. To be clear, TCF accepts LGBT members or leaders who share TCF's religious views. Indeed, a few months back, The Tufts Daily carried an op-ed from a leader of TCF who states that she is "attracted to both men and women" but is committed to TCF's religious beliefs on sexuality.
